TORRID WAVE IN THIRTEENTH DAY

Lake Michigan District To Get Relief; Heat Centers In Ohio Region

By International News Service
The heat wave droned into its thirteenth day today, with few areas expecting any relief. In the immediate vicinity of Lake Michigan, including the Chicago area, some moderation was expected, but the forecast for most of the heat-ridden states was: "continued warm."

Although thundershowers occurred in many wide scattered areas yesterday, and more were expected today, they failed in most cases to bring anything more than temporary relief. High humidity continued to add to suffering in the Midwest and East.

Samples of high temperature readings for yesterday, many of them constituting new records for the date, included 99 at Detroit and Evansville, Ind., 100 at Springfield, Ill., and Amarillo, Tex., 101 at Peoria, 102 at Cincinnati, 103 at St. Louis, and Springfield, Mo., 103 at Dodge City, Kans., and 105 at Wichita.

The two-week toll of the heat wave today was counted at well above 600 deaths, about evenly divided between drownings and prostrations. More deaths were reported each hour. Ohio, with a death toll of over 80, was believed to have the highest. Ohioans received a forecast for continued warm today, but were promised "showers and cooler" for tomorrow.

The Far West and Rocky Mountain region again reported seasonable temperatures, but the South again was feeling the force of plus 90-degree heat. The heat also crept into parts of New England, which has been spared most of its fury. The Midwest and Atlantic seaboard centers, including New York and Washington, continued to be the principal areas of blistering heat.

Motor Magnate Greets Birthday By Announcing Plans For Plane Motor

DEARBORN, Mich., July 30—Still active and looking to the future at a time in life when most men are living in their past, Henry Ford today celebrated his 77th birthday with the announcement his company will soon produce a new, 1,500 horsepower airplane motor.

The new engine, the motor magnate revealed, will be of lightweight, 60 degree V type design with 12 liquid cooled cylinders and is expected to be the most powerful ever built for airplane use.

"We have prints drawn and are ready to put the engine into production," Ford announced. "We will use an alloy metal to keep down weight and still maintain strength and durability."

"The plans for this new motor were partially drawn before the English Rolls Royce design were submitted to us. It is similar to the Rolls motor in some respects, but more closely resembles the 12-cylinder engine we now use in the Zephyr car, but is, of necessity, more than ten times as powerful."

"We will produce the motor

SCHOOL HEAD, 37, KILLER OF FIVE, ESCAPES DEATH

LOS ANGELES, July 30—Verlin Spencer, bespectacled former South Pasadena school principal who turned gunman long enough to take five lives last May 6, today faced a life prison sentence.

The 37-year-old educator drove a grim bargain in superior court yesterday when he withdrew his pleas of not guilty and not guilty by reason of insanity and entered pleas of guilty to five charges of murder and one of attempted murder.

The slayer and his attorney, William Neeley, made it clear that they took such action on the promise of prosecutors to recommend life imprisonment and not the death penalty when Spencer appears for sentence tomorrow.

The state agreed to the proposal, Judge Thomas Ambrose was informed.

Spencer's victims were George C. Bush, superintendent of South Pasadena schools; John E. Allman, high school principal; Will R. Speer, business manager; Verner Vanderlip, teacher, and Ruth Sturgeon, teacher. He also shot and seriously wounded Dr. Bush's secretary.

Spencer admitted to alienists that he had been jealous of those he slew because he believed they "had more ability than he had."

WASHINGTON, July 30—Giving right-of-way to President Roosevelt's request for immediate mobilization of the National Guard, the senate military affairs committee today temporarily laid aside the compulsory military training bill for legislation authorizing the calling of the Guard.

Sen. Sheppard (D) Tex., chairman, announced that the committee would begin hearings on the new legislation late today.

WASHINGTON, July 30—Less than 24 hours after President Roosevelt asked congress for power to mobilize the entire National Guard and Reserve Corps immediately for intensive training, the four armies of the United States were "moving up" on four fronts today for the largest-scale mimic warfare in the nation's history.

Involving more than 300,000 National Guardsmen, regulars and reserves, the army maneuvers, getting under way in earnest Saturday, will lead up to a four-day "war" August 19-22. During this period the efficacy of mobile, "blitzkrieg" warfare will be thoroughly tested.

Drastic shortage of material, chiefly tanks and scouting airplanes, which was revealed at recent maneuvers, will to some extent hamper Uncle Sam's forces as they train to protect this country in a world seething with war. Trucks, carrying printed signs, "tank," will assume the role played so significantly by the

TRENTON, N. J., July 30—The governor of New Jersey today accused the governor of Georgia of "talking through his hat," when he claims New Jersey refused extradition last year of Samuel Buchanan, an escaped Negro prisoner from Georgia, according to Gov. ## County Wheat Put Under Loans Valued At $17,000

First totals taken by the Pickaway County Conservation office Tuesday show that 55 loans, amounting to nearly $17,000, have been made. The loans included those granted Pickaway County wheat growers who have planted within their 1940 wheat allotment. They receive 74 cents a bushel for grade Number 2 wheat which is stored on the farm or shipped from elevators located within Pickaway County.

Most of the wheat is being sent to store houses in Columbus, Cincinnati and Toledo, conservation officers said, and added that they expect about 500 loans before the season is closed. Wheat in the county is reported to be of good quality, most farmers receiving a Number 2 grade which entitles them to a loan of 74 cents on a bushel.

In applying for a wheat loan, the farmer must state his wheat allotment, yield, grade, degree of smut or garlic, protein content, and net number of bushels. The loan must be approved by the county committee.

All loans are made subject to call on demand, at which time producers may pay off the loan plus interest, or deliver the wheat to the Commodity Credit Corporation. AAA officials stated that they do not anticipate that it will be necessary to call any loans before the maturity date, but said that such a measure was taken to keep the program in a flexible condition.

Boy Born In Iron Lung In Splendid Condition; Mother Doing Well, Too

LOS ANGELES, July 30—A baby born to a mother while she was confined in an iron lung and the mother, herself, were reported in excellent condition at the Los Angeles General Hospital today.

Stricken with a virulent type of infantile paralysis, the 23-year-old mother, Mrs. Virginia Matthews, gave birth to the son Sunday, it was revealed, marking the third delivery of its kind in medical annals.

Partially paralyzed from the hips down, Mrs. Matthews, mother of two sons, was removed to a private hospital a month ago. When it became apparent the child was to be born prematurely, she was transferred to the General Hospital.

Despairing of her life and giving the unborn baby a million-to-one chance of surviving, Mrs. Dan Golenterek and Nathan Spishakoff placed the mother in the iron lung.

Attended constantly, the paralyzed wife lay for 36 hours in the respirator, refusing anesthetics, declaring she "wanted to be there" when the baby came.

Actual delivery required less than 15 minutes, with the child "immunized by nature" to any future possibility of contracting the disease, according to the physicians.

TRAFFIC DEATHS SHOW INCREASE ARMED BANDITS GET $108,000

"War Jitters" Blamed For Gain; Jump In Traveling Counted, Also

CHICAGO, July 30—America's traffic toll for the first half of 1940 was 1,040 greater than for the same period last year, the National Safety Council reported today.

Deaths for the first six months this year totaled 14,740 as compared with 13,700 at the halfway point last year—an increase of 8 percent. June not only was the ninth consecutive month to show an increase over the same month of the preceding year, but its increase of 15 percent was the greatest recorded since March of 1937.

Most of the June increase was due to rural accidents. Reports from 422 cities showed an advance of only 3 percent in deaths.

The council blamed the increased toll on a 7 percent gain in motor travel and "wartime jitters." The traffic toll began to rise almost simultaneously with the outbreak of the war and reached its peak in June, when France surrendered.

Twenty-four of 40 reporting states recorded increases in traffic deaths. The largest increases were reported by Mountain and South Atlantic states, the smallest by North Central states. The Pacific states showed a decrease.

There were no June deaths in 279 cities. Kansas City, Mo., with 412,600 population, was the largest of these. Three other cities with populations between 250,000 and 500,000—Rochester, Prov., and

The list was strong at the start, quieted down for a while and then moved up again toward midday. Gains in leaders ran to a point and more, while Dupont in the blue chips was up nearly three points.

U. S. Steel was the leader of its group in advance of the board meeting, rising more than a point. The others were up fractionally. Dealings in the steel group were larger than in some time.

Aviations were stronger also, aided by the announcement of more than $80,000,000 in orders for the national defense program. Douglas rose almost two points and Boeing a point.

The Amager district and that anti-aircraft batteries, sending up hundreds of light rockets, shot down two of the British craft.

Today's renewed attacks were a continuation of yesterday's German assaults, in which 80 Nazi planes raided the port of Dover only to be driven off in the fiercest air combat of the war so far. At least 20 German planes were reported shot down yesterday.

Latest unofficial estimates from Dover said 25 German planes were destroyed in yesterday's fighting over that British port.

British bombers likewise were active against objectives in northwestern Germany and northern France as well as the low countries. Oil depots, docks and freight yards were damaged in these raids, it was stated. Oil tanks at Cherbourg were reported set on fire.

During the night and early this morning the German raids were continued. One German bomber, attempting to evade British searchlight batteries, crossed the southeast coast at a height of only a few hundred feet.

British fighters poured machine-gun tracer bullets into the Nazi machine, which crashed. German planes also crossed the northeast English coast, continuing inland.

14 Bombs on Wales

Fourteen bombs were dropped on Wales during a three-hour night raid, causing slight damage but no casualties.

Bombs also were dropped on the working class district of a northeastern English town and several houses there were damaged.

Following yesterday's announcement that the British would shoot down German rescue planes, marked with red crosses, on grounds that they were used for reconnaissance and photographic work, one of these German craft was towed into a harbor on the southeast coast late last night.

The machine was a white-painted seaplane, twin-engined with red crosses on its wings and fuselage and Nazi swastikas in scarlet on its tail. It carried two hospital cots and medical supplies and was not armed.

It was flying low over the channel near the English coast when it was forced down by British fighters. The British suggested it was a "spy plane" used for reconnaissance purposes.

The pilot of the German plane said the plane was one of a fleet of similar ships provided at the request of German bomber crews, who were described as perturbed over the heavy losses they were suffering over the English channel and hence demanded that rescue planes be sent out to pick them up if they were shot down.

ROME, July 30—A heavy Italian bombing attack on a British convoy in the Mediterranean in which severe damage was inflicted and advances in East Africa were announced today in the Italian military bulletin, which said: "Italian air formations throughout the day (yesterday) bombed a group of ships conveyed by warships, including an aircraft carrier, in the eastern Mediterranean. Several ships were seriously damaged and one was set on fire.

"One of the enemy pursuit planes was brought down in an air combat and one Italian bomber did not return to its base.

"In East Africa our occupation of Kurnuk was extended and an enemy supply column was captured.

"Aden (British naval base in Arabia) was bombed and one ship was hit."

BERLIN, July 30—German Stuka dive bombers crippled 32,000 tons of British shipping and shot down 15 British planes in the course of a terrific air raid on Dover yesterday, the German high command announced today.

(Editor's Note: The British version of the raid made no mention of shipping losses and stated that 20 Nazi planes were shot down. Several British planes were damaged but only one was lost, the British communiqué declared.)

The Nazi statement said: "German Stuka units attacked the port of Dover. Four vessels totalling 32,000 tons gross register were so badly hit they are assumed to be a total loss.

"In the course of this attack, a heavy air battle ensued in which 12 British Spitfires and three British Hurricanes as well as three of our own aircraft were brought down.

"In the course of armed reconnaissance over the English Channel and the east coast of England, we succeeded in sinking one cruiser of about 10,000 tons and a merchant ship of 1,000 tons, as well as badly damaging another British merchantman.

"On the night of July 29-30, British airplanes raided northern and western Germany. Their bombs struck only non-military objectives. In Dusseldorf, for instance, five houses were heavily damaged, with resultant fires charging metal fortresses in Adolf Hitler's European conquests.

The four localities into which the vanguard of the 300,000 is moving today, and in which those traditional enemies of mock warfare—the "blacks" and the "blues"—will come into conflict are: First Army, New York State; Second Army, Wisconsin; Third Army, Louisiana; Fourth Army, Washington and Minnesota.

Pitch Camp Saturday

The soldiers are moving by train and truck. Bulk of the troops will not pitch camp until Saturday, but many regulars are getting settled in the concentration areas already.

The war games mark the first time in army annals that all four field forces have gone into action simultaneously—an indication of the pessimism which pervades the administration and the military over the international situation.

Nearly 500 special trains will transport about 150,000 of the soldiers to camp. The rest will go by automobile, truck or bus. The trains will comprise 3,112 coaches, 1,324 baggage cars, 247 stock cars, 54 box cars and 497 flat cars.

Problems Are Myriad

The President's request for power to mobilize the full 250,000-man strength of the National Guard intensified planning by the War Department to meet myriad problems which such a mobilization would pose. The first group to be called to service would number about 50,000 men, comprising four divisions and some coast guard and anti-aircraft units.

The size of ensuing groups mustered has not been decided. War Department officials said that possibly the remaining 200,000 troops would be called up together.

Army officials disclosed that when, and if, the guard bill passes, the war department will suggest legislation similar to that passed in 1917 protecting the civil rights of men called to service—right to reclaim their jobs, to social security payments, to protection against mortgage foreclosures, etc.

which it was carried out, that the bandits' car was careening down the main street in the direction of Long Branch before an alarm was sounded.

Even then police found eyewitnesses in confusion on the number of men who took part in the hold-up. Some said there were six men, others only three.

The messengers were pounced on by three men as they were about to enter the postoffice. "This is a stickup," said one of the bandits. "Hand it over."

There was a gun in his hand as he made the demand. No other words were spoken. The bandits grabbed the pouch, ran across the street and jumped into their getaway car. It swung into high gear immediately and raced away.

The bank messengers, Clarence Barton and Joseph Sturm, said they believed two other men were in the car. Other eyewitnesses said there were three.

A police teletype alarm was flashed a few minutes after the holdup and a police blockade of all roads leading out of Asbury Park was instituted.

The loot consisted of wrapped bills in packages of several thousand dollars each. It was "excess funds" and was to have been sent to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York by registered mail.

LONDON DENIES CLOSING PORT

The Amager district and that anti-aircraft batteries, sending up hundreds of light rockets, shot down two of the British craft.)

Today's renewed attacks were a continuation of yesterday's German assaults, in which 80 Nazi planes raided the port of Dover only to be driven off in the fiercest air combat of the war so far. At least 20 German planes were reported shot down yesterday.

Latest unofficial estimates from Dover said 25 German planes were destroyed in yesterday's fighting over that British port.

British bombers likewise were active against objectives in northwestern Germany and northern France as well as the low countries. Oil depots, docks and freight yards were damaged in these raids, it was stated. Oil tanks at Cherbourg were reported set on fire.

During the night and early this morning the German raids were continued. One German bomber, attempting to evade British searchlight batteries, crossed the southeast coast at a height of only a few hundred feet.

British fighters poured machine-gun tracer bullets into the Nazi machine, which crashed. German planes also crossed the northeast English coast, continuing inland.

14 Bombs on Wales

Fourteen bombs were dropped on Wales during a three-hour night raid, causing slight damages but no casualties.

Bombs also were dropped on the working class district of a northeastern English town and several houses there were damaged.

Following yesterday's announcement that the British would shoot down German rescue planes, marked with red crosses, on grounds that they were used for reconnaissance and photographic work, one of these German craft was towed into a harbor on the southeast coast late last night.

The machine was a white-painted seaplane, twin-engined with red crosses on its wings and fuselage and Nazi swastikas in scarlet on its tail. It carried two hospital cots and medical supplies and was not armed.

It was flying low over the channel near the English coast when it was forced down by British fighters. The British suggested it was a "spy plane" used for reconnaissance purposes.

The pilot of the German plane said the plane was one of a fleet of similar ships provided at the request of German bomber crews, who were described as perturbed over the heavy losses they were suffering over the English channel and hence demanded that rescue planes be sent out to pick them up if they were shot down.

BERLIN, July 30—German Stuka dive bombers crippled 32,000 tons of British shipping and shot down 15 British planes in the course of a terrific air raid on Dover yesterday, the German high command announced today.

(Editor's Note: The British version of the raid made no mention of shipping losses and stated that 20 Nazi planes were shot down. Several British planes were damaged but only one was lost, the British communiqué declared.)

The Nazi statement said: "German Stuka units attacked the port of Dover. Four vessels totalling 32,000 tons gross register were so badly hit they are assumed to be a total loss.

EIGHT GERMAN-BORN MEN LOSE OHIO PLANT JOBS

WILLOUGHBY, O., July 30 — Dismissal of eight German-born workers at the Ohio Rubber Co., Willoughby, was confirmed today by company officials.

The discharges, which have taken place in the last week, were "for the best interests of the company," officials contended. Ohio rubber recently constructed a $100,000 addition to take care of federal rearmament orders.

Willoughby residents charged that several of those discharged were pro-Nazi, and that one of them owned a farm alleged to have been the center of German-American Bund activities.

Pitch Camp Saturday
The soldiers are moving by train and truck. Bulk of the troops will not pitch camp until Saturday, but many regulars are getting settled in the concentration areas already.

The war games mark the first time in army annals that all four field forces have gone into action simultaneously—an indication of the pessimism which pervades the administration and the military over the international situation.

Nearly 500 special trains will transport about 150,000 of the soldiers to camp. The rest will go by automobile, truck or bus. The trains will comprise 3,112 coaches, 1,324 baggage cars, 247 stock cars, 54 box cars and 497 flat cars.

Problems Are Myriad
The President's request for power to mobilize the full 250,000-man strength of the National Guard intensified planning by the War Department to meet myriad problems which such a mobilization would pose. The first group to be called to service would number about 50,000 men, comprising four divisions and some coast guard and anti-aircraft units.

The size of ensuing groups mustered has not been decided. War Department officials said that possibly the remaining 200,000 troops would be called up together.

Army officials disclosed that when, and if, the guard bill passes, the war department will suggest legislation similar to that passed in 1917 protecting the civil rights of men called to service—right to reclaim their jobs, to social security payments, to protection against mortgage foreclosures, etc.

Malone, arrested July 19, with Nathan Van Smith, 23 and John W. ## Time Out For Repairs

TWO-YEAR-OLD Mary Ann Collins and Rose Marie Lynch, 7, were among the hundreds of children who had sought refuge from the oppressive heat of New York's sidewalks in one of the city's many wading pools. A button popped. Down came Mary's panties. Marie had an extra safety pin. Everybody's happy.

which it was carried out, that the bandits' car was careening down the main street in the direction of Long Branch before an alarm was sounded.

Even then police found eyewitnesses in confusion on the number of men who took part in the hold-up. Some said there were six men, others only three.

The messengers were pounced on by three men as they were about to enter the postoffice. "This is a stickup," said one of the bandits. "Hand it over."

There was a gun in his hand as he made the demand. No other words were spoken. The bandits grabbed the pouch, ran across the street and jumped into their getaway car. It swung into high gear immediately and raced away.

The bank messengers, Clarence Barton and Joseph Sturm, said they believed two other men were in the car. Other eyewitnesses said there were three.

A police teletype alarm was flashed a few minutes after the holdup and a police blockade of all roads leading out of Asbury Park was instituted.

The loot consisted of wrapped bills in packages of several thousand dollars each. It was "excess funds" and was to have been sent to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York by registered mail.

DEBATE TO BE BITTER

Senator Wheeler To Offer
Substitute Measure
For Present Plan

WASHINGTON, July 30.—With the compulsory military training program facing stiff opposition, senate leaders were ready today to give right of way to President Roosevelt's request for immediate authority to mobilize the National Guard and the Officers' Reserve.

Word was passed out privately that the President's latest preparedness move will be given preference, if necessary, as mounting opposition to the conscription program threatened to delay debate until next week.

Although the senate military affairs committee plans to formally approve the conscription bill today and send it to the senate, Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky, joined in the wide-spread movement to postpone debate until Monday or Tuesday.

"My guess is that on an important bill like this the senate will want to study it for some time before we begin debate," Barkley said.

Opposition senators predicted that further delay on the measure will operate to their advantage, pointing out that thousands of letters are being received daily by members asking them to vote against the measure.

Bill Can Be Licked

"If the bill can be held off for a few days it can be licked," said Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., a member of a large bipartisan bloc which believes the army can be expanded to total defense strength through voluntary enlistment.

As Sen. Wheeler (D), Mont., demanded that President Roosevelt and his Republican opponent, Wendell L. Willkie, declare themselves on the conscription bill, Barkley predicted debate will last several weeks. Other senators said if debate continues more than 10 days the less controversial guard mobilization legislation will be brought up for action.

Assailing the proposal for a year's selective military training for men between 21 and 45 as similar to methods employed by Hitler, Wheeler said he will offer a substitute program. It would suspend the minimum three-year enlistment period in the army and permit volunteers to serve for one year. The six-year enlistment period for the navy would also be reduced to a minimum of one year.

"I shall propose legislation to permit enlistments for a period of one year and I am sure we will get all the men needed," Wheeler said.

As a number of other senators planned amendments to curtail the conscription program it was learned that its co-sponsor Sen. Burke (D), Neb., is willing to eliminate the section that calls for registration of men between 18 and 20 and 45 to 65 for home defense training.

Sen. Tydings (D), Md., is ready to sponsor legislation which would compensate wage earners who are required to serve a year in the National Guard, and the selective military training program.

"There ought to be some legislation to make up for the salaries that persons required to serve in the programs will lose," Tydings said. He explained the conscription bill would give drafters the basic rate of enlistment pay, $21 per month.

Sen. Ellender (D), La., will introduce amendments to further reduce the scope of the program. He would eliminate from the military conscription program all members of accredited military schools and colleges and members of the R. O. T. C.

Series Of Agreements To Protect Western World Receives Approval

HAVANA, July 30.—Unity of the Western Hemisphere against German, Italian or any other foreign totalitarian encroachments appeared today after the conference of Inter-American Foreign Ministers unanimously approved a series of agreements for protection and defense of the new world.

The delegates gave their approval to a convention designed to frustrate any Nazi or other non-American attempt to dominate the colonies of European states in the Americas. They also approved the act of Havana, under which these principles may be applied in any emergency pending their ratification.

tion by the 21 Pan American republics.

As a result, Secretary of State Hull prepared to leave Havana for Washington today with the knowledge that his mission had been carried out successfully and that the United States program for Pan American defense had been accepted in all its broad outlines.

Delegates, however, expressed the view that the Havana conference merely has laid the foundation for action and that this must be supported by a solid military and economic structure if it is to stand staunchly in a time of crisis.

Operates a large farm and has many cattle he told us, and too, that this was his first trip this far South in the state and if they remained over night here, would see the Ohio River territory Sunday. Just another of the friendly ones.

Director Fred Hines and his 60-piece member V. F. W. band was off from here Sunday forenoon to Springfield to attend the V. F. W. meeting held there. Mr. Hines told us it was an enjoyable outing for his organization and that they were royally treated and served to a chicken dinner with full trimmings.

ed in the six resolutions adopted by the conference, which in sum total strongly affirm the resistance of the Americas against possible Nazi inroads.

In addition, the resolutions tacitly give the United States a "go ahead" signal to carry out all necessary military and naval preparations throughout the continent.

Secretary Hull plans to sum up reaction to the work of the conference in a formal statement to the United States.

Transfer Prevented

Sitting late last night, the full conference passed the Act of Havana, opposing European intrusion in the Western Hemisphere and establishing a committee to deal with colonies of European countries in the Americas to prevent their transfer from one non-American nation to another.

In addition, a sweeping resolution for economic cooperation among the American republics likewise was approved.

The Act of Havana states that "any transfer or attempted transfer of sovereignty, jurisdiction or possession of any interest in or control of such regions (European colonies in the Western Hemisphere) to another non-American state would be regarded by the American republics as contrary to American sentiment and principles and the right of American states to maintain their security and political independence."

It adds that "no such transfer or attempt to transfer or acquire any interest or right in any such region directly or indirectly would be recognized or accepted by the American republics, no matter what form is employed in order to achieve such a purpose."

"By virtue of the principles of American international law recognized by various conferences, acquisition of such territory by force cannot be permitted," the act continued.

Administration Provided

Other resolutions adopted by the conference include a declaration establishing machinery for administration of European possessions in the Americas if such action proves necessary, a resolution against subversive activities, another establishing a committee to draft proposals protecting American neutrality, another further fostering inter-American economic and financial cooperation and still another spurring construction of an inter-American highway.

Most important was the Havana declaration, over which Hull and the Argentine delegate, Dr. Leopoldo Melo long argued.

In its final status, this closely resembles the original United States proposal for a trusteeship over foreign possession in the western world to prevent them from changing from one non-European state to another.

It also affirms the right of individual American nations to take such regions under their administration and deliberate as to their destinies in a crisis.

In practice, this means that the United States is given this right, since the United States is the only Western Hemisphere nation with sufficient naval power to oppose a large European power.

Such occupation of these territories, however, would merely be temporary, pending settlement of permanent status of such colonies. The resolution states:

"This system entails no danger because the American republics do not entertain any purpose whatsoever of territorial aggrandizement."

Secretary Hull plans to sum up reaction to the work of the conference in a formal statement to the United States.

Transfer Prevented

Sitting late last night, the full conference passed the Act of Havana, opposing European intrusion in the Western Hemisphere and establishing a committee to deal with colonies of European countries in the Americas to prevent their transfer from one non-American nation to another.

In addition, a sweeping resolution for economic cooperation among the American republics likewise was approved.

The Act of Havana states that "any transfer or attempted transfer of sovereignty, jurisdiction or possession of any interest in or control of such regions (European colonies in the Western Hemisphere) to another non-American state would be regarded by the American republics as contrary to the American sentiment and principles and the right of American states to maintain their security and political independence."

It adds that "no such transfer or attempt to transfer or acquire any interest or right in any such region directly or indirectly would be recognized or accepted by the American republics, no matter what form is employed in order to achieve such a purpose."

"By virtue of the principles of American international law recognized by various conferences, acquisition of such territory by force cannot be permitted," the act continued.

Administration Adopted

Other resolutions adopted by the conference include a declaration establishing machinery for administration of European possessions in the Americas if such action proves necessary, a resolution against subversive activities, another establishing a committee to draft proposals protecting American neutrality, another further fostering inter-American economic and financial cooperation and still another spurring construction of an inter-American highway.

Most important was the Havana declaration, over which Hull and the Argentine delegate, Dr. Leopoldo Melo long argued.

In its final status, this closely resembles the original United States proposal for a trusteeship over foreign possession in the western world to prevent them from changing from one non-European state to another.

It also affirms the right of individual American nations to take such regions under their administration and deliberate as to their destinies in a crisis.

In practice, this means that the United States is given this right, since the United States is the only Western Hemisphere nation with sufficient naval power to oppose a large European power.

Such occupation of these territories, however, would merely be temporary, pending settlement of permanent status of such colonies. The resolution states:

"This system entails no danger because the American republics do not entertain any purpose whatsoever of territorial aggrandizement."

SECOND DEGREE MURDER CHARGED IN STABBING

WASHINGTON, C. H., July 30

Fayette County Prosecutor W. S. Paxson has announced that he will file a second degree murder charge against Richard Garrett, 23, Negro, Xenia, for the fatal stabbing of William (Tex) Rickman, 44, Negro, on the Fayette County Fairgrounds Friday night.

The prosecutor's action followed an announcement by Sheriff W. H. Icenhower that he had found three witnesses to the fatal stabbing. According to stories of the witnesses, Rickman was seated in the automobile of Kenneth Bell, of Dayton, with Luther Scott, of Xenia, a half-brother of Garrett, when Garrett went up to the car and asked Rickman if he wanted to fight. Rickman told him no, and Garrett is alleged to have drawn a pocket knife and stabbed him. The story is entirely different from the one told by Garrett, who maintained Rickman was the aggressor in the fight and that he had stabbed him in self defense.

The body of the victim was removed to Richmond, Indiana, on orders of his mother, Mrs. Clara Rickman. Funeral services were held at Richmond Tuesday afternoon.

SAM R. JOHNSON HIRED TO TEACH AT WESTERVILLE

Member Of C. H. S. Faculty
For Last Three Years
In New Position

The Westerville Board of Education announced Tuesday that it had employed Samuel R. Johnson, member of the Circleville High School faculty, to teach English and speech in its schools starting this fall.

Mr. Johnson has been a member of the Circleville teaching staff for the last three years, coming to this city from Upper Arlington. He is a graduate of Wittenberg College and has been taking post graduate work this summer at Ohio State University.

Mr. Johnson gained a reputation as an excellent English teacher and as an outstanding coach of dramatic productions and debating when in Circleville. Superintendent Frank Fischer, informed of Johnson's employment at Westerville, said that nothing had been done concerning a successor here. Mr. Johnson is the husband of the former Eleanor Miller of Circleville.

The Westerville board announced at the same time that it had employed three other faculty members for the new school term.

PLANES BY 1942
It is a good thing to understand a situation clearly. If it is unpleasant, knowing the truth makes two things possible. It enables people to prepare themselves mentally for the consequences. And it enables them to make plans to improve the situation or to ameliorate its effects.
Thus, it is well to have William S. Knudsen's flat "no" to the question of whether this country can soon supply as many as 3,000 planes a month to Great Britain. It is well to know that 38 new plants and their equipment would be required before such production could be achieved, and that the middle of 1942 would be about their earliest date for their completion.
There must be no deception of the British government in this respect. And we must not deceive ourselves as to the help we can give them.
And what of 1942? Will there still be the tremendous need for military airplanes by then? No one can foresee the state of Europe or the developments in this hemisphere six months ahead, or even a few weeks. We can only act as wisely as we know how to meet the conditions that seem to face us.

BETTER WHEAT
SCIENTISTS of the Georgia Experiment Station have been trying for twenty years to develop better wheat. Now they have one said to resist leaf-rot and to be capable of much higher yield than any they have grown before. The new grain has been named the Sanford Wheat in honor of Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the state university system. More than 3,000 bushels of the new seed wheat will be distributed to Georgia farmers this autumn. If it proves to be all that is hoped, it should bring several dollars an acre extra to the farmers who plant and cultivate it.
Quietly and patiently the research scientists of university and government experiment stations go about their labors. Often they are hardly heard of outside of their immediate localities. But their work is extremely useful, for the present and future of America.
Walter Lippman says neither presidential candidate has begun to tell the truth about the country's defenseless plight. Maybe they are leaving that to the columnists.

WORLD AT A GLANCE ..... —By— Charles P. Stewart
POLITICIANS, back in Washington for the reassembling of congress, still are so badly disorganized by the two conventions' results that a lot of them admit they hardly know how they do classify partisanship.
Wendell L. Willkie always was a Democrat until recently. The Republicans nominated him for president. Henry A. Wallace was a Republican until a few years ago. The Democrats nominated him for vice president. Old-line Democrats deny that President Roosevelt's a Democrat. Instead, they say he's a New Dealer—altogether a different thing, they insist, from either a Democrat or a Republican. Charles L. McNary's label is Republican alright. But is the Republican party still the Republican party? Hasn't it become old-line Democratic? Anyway, quite a few of the old liners wanted to endorse Republican Nominee Willkie on their Democratic ticket. And, as McNary is the running mate of Willkie, doesn't that make him an old-line Democrat?
Willkie says he never left the Democratic party; it left him, so he'd no option but to become a Republican. But Wallace, on being deserted by the Republican party, to which he'd belonged, didn't say he was becoming a Democrat; what he said he was becoming was a New Dealer.
If there were three clean-cut parties (Democratic, Republican and New Deal), with three sets of candidates, the situation would not be so puzzling.
But the three are completely

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round
BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN
WHEELER AND ISOLATIONISTS
WASHINGTON—Senator Wheeler's prediction that the compulsory training bill faces a "rocky road in the Senate" only tells half the story.
What Wheeler didn't disclose was that he and the other isolationists are secretly prepared to wage a filibuster to prevent passage of a draft act. They believe that with an election in the offing the threat of a knock-down legislature battle will frighten the politicians and make them drop the bill until after November.
Then, they figure, it will be too late to do anything until next spring, by which time they are confident developments will show that such a drastic step is not needed.
This is a tremendous gamble, of course, with the nation's security at the stake. But that doesn't faze Wheeler and his isolationist friends. They have been gambling like this for months, always guessing wrong but still insisting they are right.
They derided Roosevelt's warning that a European war was imminent and when war did break, they pooh-poohed it as a "phony" conflict. They fought his repeal of the arms embargo and when finally defeated, have fought every move to aid first the French and now the British.
Because of overwhelming public sentiment the Wheeler bloc has trod a weary course on the various rearmament measures. But they are going to take off the wraps on the compulsory draft bill and they may be able to block it.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS
Congressional committee hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth bill for peacetime conscription have brought sharp division of opinion.
Appearing before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, peace leader Frederick J. Libby declared the bill "would fill our jails and prisons, not only with young men but with their pastors and with church leaders."
Retorted war veteran Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana: "Then we'll build more prisons."
NOTE—The bill now contains modifications exempting conscientious objectors. Responsible for them were Harold Evans, E. Raymond Wilson, and Paul French, all members of the Society of Friends (Quakers).

FACTORY DOOR CAMPAIGN
Wendell Willkie plans to use the same dynamic tactics in his election campaign as those which won him the GOP nomination. In addition to touring the country by train, auto and plane, he also has up his sleeve some novel vote-winning methods.
One is what he calls "factory door" meetings; snappy 15-minute gatherings during lunch periods at large industrial plants, at which he will make a short talk and then hold a question-and-answer session with the workers. On the list for such unique rallies are Detroit auto plants, steel mills in Ohio and Pennsylvania, coal

Mixed-Up Candidates
Up until the very last minute (even after the Roosevelt nomination) I talked with numerous anti-third termers who predicted that F. D. R. wouldn't accept the draft—that he'd announce that all he wanted was an endorsement, but preferred not to run again.
Deeming it desirable to do so, Roosevelt had no choice but to disappoint this element. However, he undoubtedly could have prevented the vice presidential nomination of Henry A. Wallace.
Now, Wallace is a corking good New Dealer. He's a strong campaigner. But he's as much a Republican as Willkie is a Democrat.
Very well, then. When the Republicans nominated Willkie, it looked like a fair conclusion that many a Republican would resent having a Democrat at the head of his party's ticket—that the G.O.P. would lose a goodly number of votes thereby.
Now, though, the Democrats have Wallace, a Republican on THEIR ticket. Yes, and a couple of 'em in their cabinet. They're not in much of a position to talk about Willkie, as an ex-Democratically Republican nominee.
And, by the way, Republicans belatedly recognize that Chairman John M. D. Hamilton made a capital mistake in reading Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox out of the G. O. P. for accepting Roosevelt cabinet posts. What he OUGHT to have done, argue Republican strategists, was to thank heaven that F.D.R. had the good judgment to enlist Republican aid for his administration.

Bare Feet Invite Trouble
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
● WHENEVER the bare feet come in contact with the flooring of a shower bath, or the platform around a swimming pool, or the springboard by river or ocean, there is the possibility of picking up a small vegetable fungus invisible to the eye, which lives to feed on moist human skin. It causes the commonest of American skin diseases—a breaking out in the form of little blisters, which itch intensely and become inflamed on scratching. This being the bare feet and swimming season they are particularly likely to occur

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.
just now. When the skin gets wet it gives an additional invitation to ringworm invasion—commonly called athlete's foot.
Treat Promptly
Get it at early with prompt treatment and you will save yourself a lot of trouble. If it develops into a chronic case, successful treatment is very difficult. The fungus will attack skin on any part of the body and may easily invade the hand, get under the fingernails from scratching and be carried to any part of the body. A complication occurs when the blisters get infected and this requires special treatment.
When you have a fresh eruption the blisters should be broken, using a fine needle that has been dipped in tincture of iodine and the entire surface painted with mild tincture of iodine (U.S.P.). The eruption is especially likely to appear between the toes, and in boy's schools is called toe rot. If the iodine does not clear it up apply

Whitfield's ointment, obtainable at any drugstore, for a few nights. Prevention of reinfection is important. Stockings should be changed daily. Disinfection of shoes may be done by inserting a piece of blotting paper on which has been poured a teaspoonful of formaldehyde solution, wrap them up for twenty-four hours and then give them a good airing.
When infection has occurred and pus forms the part should be treated with gauze soaked in 1 to 1000 bichloride of mercury solution, then dried and ammoniated mercury ointment applied. After the acute inflammation has subsided the part should be treated with mild tincture of iodine and Whitfield's ointment.
Many Different Forms
There are many different forms of ringworm, some of them being killed by one germicide, some by another. Hence the number of remedies that have been suggested at one time or another are legion. The fungi are great sensitizers of the skin and in the chronic form this makes the application of strong ointments difficult. The use of a powder called Quinsana, made up of Hydroxyl-quinoline, sodium borate, sodium perborate and boric acid has been followed with good results. It may be powdered on the parts, between the toes, on the groin if crossed infection has occurred there (dibothic itch), on the toe nails and finger nails.

Love without Music
Helen Welshimer
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION
CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT
"COULD anyone have wanted your life?" the commissioner had asked Linda just as she saw the initial in the handkerchief which she had retrieved from the floor of the office.
A small, hand-blocked initial appeared in one corner. It was an Old English "M." It might have stood for Mina or it might have stood for Markley or maybe it just represented a Margaret or a Mary.
She gazed at it, fascinated. Still not answering the question, she lifted the small square to her nose and the scent was stronger now.
She handed the object to the commissioner. "I found this on the floor just now. I thought it was mine until I picked it up."
"An 'M,'" the man said. "And your name is Linda Avery and the dead girl is Clarabell Ackerman. Do you know an enemy whose name begins with 'M'?"
Linda hesitated. If only she had someone to guide her. If Ronnie would come, or Rob had been present they would answer for her. It was quite possible that the murderer had mistaken Clarabell Ackerman for her, but that murderer couldn't be Mina Nevins. She had been on the air at the time of the murder.
Her hesitation was noticed by the police. "Better answer all questions, Miss Avery. It will be easier. And simpler."
"Could I see you alone?" she asked, and her voice sounded small and tired even to her own ears.
She dared not mention Mina Nevins in front of these reporters. Some of them had gone, scampering to the nearest telephones to tell their night editors to change a page.
Whether the commissioner would have said that he would talk to her alone or not, Linda never knew, for at that moment the door opened and a tall figure appeared.
"Oh, Robert!" She was across the room, and his strong arms were steady, her before the words had left her lips.
There was peace and poise and comfort in his presence. She was so joyfully, tearfully glad that he had come.
"Someone sent word to your apartment that you were here. No one was home, but I happened to be passing," he said. "Of course I came right away."
Briefly Robert was informed of the events of the past hour. His eyes sobered at the sight of the girl who slumped over the desk. No move had been made to conceal her or take her away.
"Couldn't we have a conference, commissioner?" Robert asked. "You said that this murder might be a case of mistaken identity. It's quite true, and yet—"
"May I talk alone to Mr. Barton?" Linda asked. "For just a moment, please?"
The man hesitated. From the canyon of the streets below there came the subdued sound of the night traffic. The theaters were long since out and the play spots were gay and crowded, and the taxicabs carried groups from one to another.
The rain was growing steeper and harder, and it beat against the windows. Grateful as she was for Robert's protection, Linda wished anxiously that Ronnie would come. Maybe he hadn't received any message. And why didn't the commissioner give his consent?

"Everything will come out in the investigation and the coroner's inquest," the official answered. "Any light you may throw on the happening now will save you embarrassment later. However, if you wish a conference, the inner office will do nicely. I'll stay on guard."
It was Robert who answered. "I think you had better come with us. I've a pretty good idea what Miss Avery hesitates to say. It involves a third party, and on the surface sounds ridiculous."
Robert took the lead in the conversation, but it was Linda who mentioned the fact that Mina Nevins could not have left the room where she was broadcasting to come to the office, do a murder, leave, and continue with the program.
In the first place, there would not have been time for her to even reach the place, let alone return. In the second place, the doors always were locked during a broadcast and she could not have left the auditorium where she was speaking during the musical intermission.
"And in the third place, there will be dozens of witnesses to testify she was on hand all the time," the commissioner added. "I'm afraid she's out. But that 'M'—stands for Mina. How many girls in your office have the initial 'M'—models, office force, anyone?"
Linda thought carefully. There wasn't an "M" in the group. She would have declared that there were several, speaking off-handedly, but the inventory showed none.

PLANES BY 1942

It is a good thing to understand a situation clearly. If it is unpleasant, knowing the truth makes two things possible. It enables people to prepare themselves mentally for the consequences. And it enables them to make plans to improve the situation or to ameliorate its effects.

Thus, it is well to have William S. Knudsen's flat "no" to the question of whether this country can soon supply as many as 3,000 planes a month to Great Britain. It is well to know that 38 new plants and their equipment would be required before such production could be achieved, and that the middle of 1942 would be about their earliest date for their completion.

There must be no deception of the British government in this respect. And we must not deceive ourselves as to the help we can give them.

And what of 1942? Will there still be the tremendous need for military airplanes by then? No one can foresee the state of Europe or the developments in this hemisphere six months ahead, or even a few weeks. We can only act as wisely as we know how to meet the conditions that seem to face us.

BETTER WHEAT

SCIENTISTS of the Georgia Experiment Station have been trying for twenty years to develop better wheat. Now they have one said to resist leaf-rot and to be capable of much higher yield than any they have grown before. The new grain has been named the Sanford Wheat in honor of Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the state university system. More than 3,000 bushels of the new seed wheat will be distributed to Georgia farmers this autumn. If it proves to be all that is hoped, it should bring several dollars an acre extra to the farmers who plant and cultivate it.

Quietly and patiently the research scientists of university and government experiment stations go about their labors. Often they are hardly heard of outside of their immediate localities. But their work is extremely useful, for the present and future of America.

Walter Lippman says neither presidential candidate has begun to tell the truth about the country's defenseless plight. Maybe they are leaving that to the columnists.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By— Charles P. Stewart

POLITICIANS, back in Washington for the reassembling of congress, still are so badly disorganized by the two conventions' results that a lot of them admit they hardly know how they do classify partisanship.

Wendell L. Willkie always was a Democrat until recently. The Republicans nominated him for president. Henry A. Wallace was a Republican until a few years ago. The Democrats nominated him for vice president. Old-line Democrats deny that President Roosevelt's a Democrat. Instead, they say he's a New Dealer—all together a different thing, they insist, from either a Democrat or a Republican. Charles L. McNary's label is Republican alright. But is the Republican party still the Republican party? Hasn't it become old-line Democratic? Anyway, quite a few of the old liners wanted to endorse Republican Nominee Willkie on their Democratic ticket. And, as McNary is the running mate of Willkie, doesn't that make him an old-line Democrat?

Willkie says he never left the Democratic party; it left him, so he'd no option but to become a Republican. But Wallace, on being deserted by the Republican party, to which he'd belonged, didn't say he was becoming a Democrat; what he said he was becoming was a New Dealer.

If there were three clean-cut parties (Democratic, Republican and New Deal), with three sets of candidates, the situation would not be so puzzling.

But the three are completely scrambled, with only two sets of candidates.

A Smear Campaign

That it will be a smear campaign is evident from the outset.

The Willkies (whether Republicans, old-line Democrats or whatnot) are going to go after President on grounds of his third-term candidacy. He'll be accused of leading a movement in the direction of a dictatorship's establishment.

And Willkie already is being attacked as a power magnate.

New Deal policies will be an issue, but it will be a bit clouded by the consideration that the Willkie people hesitate to say that they weren't largely meritorious in principle. They'll say they've been rightfully bungled in administration, but they'll hesitate to give an impression that Willkie is reactionary.

Both sides will be pro-defense.

The Willkie folk will accuse the New Dealers of spending a maximum amount of money on it for a minimum of results, but they'll profess to acquiesce in the essential program.

Both sides will be for American nonparticipation in overseas warfare.

The Democrats will point out that they adopted a stronger platform plank on the subject than the Republicans did, but the average voter doesn't pay much attention to platforms. They're too wordy and tiresome to study.

Third termism and power are going to be the principal topics of campaign oratory and printed propaganda.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WHEELER AND ISOLATIONISTS

WASHINGTON—Senator Wheeler's prediction that the compulsory training bill faces a "rocky road in the Senate" only tells half the story.

What Wheeler didn't disclose was that he and the other isolationists are secretly prepared to wage a filibuster to prevent passage of a draft act. They believe that with an election in the offing the threat of a knock-down legislature battle will frighten the politicians and make them drop the bill until after November.

Then, they figure, it will be too late to do anything until next spring, by which time they are confident developments will show that such a drastic step is not needed.

This is a tremendous gamble, of course, with the nation's security as the stake. But that doesn't faze Wheeler and his isolationist friends. They have been gambling like this for months, always guessing wrong but still insisting they are right.

They derided Roosevelt's warning that a European war was imminent and when war did break, they pooh-poohed it as a "phony" conflict. They fought his repeal of the arms embargo and when finally defeated, have fought every move to aid first the French and now the British.

Because of overwhelming public sentiment the Wheeler bloc has trod a wary course on the various rearmament measures. But they are going to take off the wraps on the compulsory draft bill and they may be able to block it.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS

Congressional committee hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth bill for peacetime conscription have brought sharp division of opinion.

Appearing before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, peace leader Frederick J. Libby declared the bill "would fill our jails and prisons, not only with young men but with their pastors and with church leaders."

Retorted war veteran Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana: "Then we'll build more prisons."

NOTE—The bill now contains modifications exempting conscientious objectors. Responsible for them were Harold Evans, E. Raymond Wilson, and Paul French, all members of the Society of Friends (Quakers).

FACTORY DOOR CAMPAIGN

Wendell Willkie plans to use the same dynamic tactics in his election campaign as those which won him the GOP nomination. In addition to touring the country by train, auto and plane, he also has up his sleeve some novel vote-wooing methods.

One is what he calls "factory door" meetings; snappy 15-minute gatherings during lunch periods at large industrial plants, at which he will make a short talk and then hold a question-and-answer session with the workers. On the list for such unique rallies are Detroit auto plants, steel mills in Ohio and Pennsylvania, coal

Bare Feet Invite Trouble

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHENEVER the bare feet come in contact with the flooring of a shower bath, or the platform around a swimming pool, or the springboard by river or ocean, there is the possibility of picking up a small vegetable fungus invisible to the eye, which lives to feed on moist human skin. It causes the commonest of American skin diseases—a breaking out in the form of little blisters, which itch intensely and become inflamed on scratching. This being the bare feet and swimming season they are particularly likely to occur.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

just now. When the skin gets wet it gives an additional invitation to ringworm invasion—commonly called athlete's foot.

Treat Promptly

Get at it early with prompt treatment and you will save yourself a lot of trouble. If it develops into a chronic case, successful treatment is very difficult. The fungus will attack skin on any part of the body and may easily invade the hand, get under the fingernails from scratching and be carried to any part of the body. A complication occurs when the blisters get infected and this requires special treatment.

When you have a fresh eruption the blisters should be broken, using a fine needle that has been dipped in tincture of iodine and the entire surface painted with mild tincture of iodine (U.S.P.). The eruption is especially likely to appear between the toes, and in boy's schools is called toe rot. If the iodine does not clear it up apply

Whitfield's ointment, obtainable at any drugstore, for a few nights.

Prevention of reinfection is important. Stockings should be changed daily. Disinfection of shoes may be done by inserting a piece of blotting paper on which has been poured a teaspoonful of Formaldehyde solution, wrap them up for twenty-four hours and then give them a good airing.

When infection has occurred and pus forms the part should be treated with gauze soaked in 1 to 1000 bichloride of mercury solution, then dried and ammoniated mercury ointment applied. After the acute inflammation has subsided the part should be treated with mild tincture of iodine and Whitfield's ointment.

Many Different Forms

There are many different forms of ringworm, some of them being killed by one germicide, some by another. Hence the number of remedies that have been suggested at one time or another are legion. The fungi are great sensitizers of the skin and in the chronic form this makes the application of strong ointments difficult. The use of a powder called Quinsana, made up of Hydroxyl-quinoline, sodium borate, sodium perborate and boric acid has been followed with good results. It may be powdered on the parts, between the toes, on the groin if crossed infection has occurred there (diabetic itch), on the toe nails and finger nails.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope to Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Week Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetic," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

"COULD anyone have wanted your life?" the commissioner had asked Linda just as she saw the initial in the handkerchief which she had retrieved from the floor of the office.

A small, hand-blocked initial appeared in one corner. It was an Old English "M." It might have stood for Mina or it might have stood for Markley or maybe it just represented a Margaret or a Mary.

She gazed at it, fascinated. Still not answering the question, she lifted the small square to her nose and the scent was stronger now. She handed the object to the commissioner. "I found this on the floor just now. I thought it was mine until I picked it up."

"An 'M,'" the man said. "And your name is Linda Avery and the dead girl is Clarabell Ackerman. Do you know an enemy whose name begins with 'M'?"

Linda hesitated. If only she had someone to guide her. If Ronnie would come, or Rob had been present they would answer for her. It was quite possible that the murderer had mistaken Clarabell Ackerman for her, but that murderer couldn't be Mina Nevins. She had been on the air at the time of the murder.

Her hesitation was noticed by the police. "Better answer all questions, Miss Avery. It will be easier. And simpler."

"Could I see you alone?" she asked, and her voice sounded small and tired even to her own ears.

She dared not mention Mina Nevins in front of these reporters. Some of them had gone, scampering to the nearest telephones to tell their night editors to change a page.

Whether the commissioner would have said that he would talk to her alone or not, Linda never knew, for at that moment the door opened and a tall figure appeared.

"Oh, Robert!" She was across the room, and his strong arms were steadying her, before the words had left her lips.

There was peace and poise and comfort in his presence. She was so joyfully, tearfully glad that he had come.

"Someone sent word to your apartment that you were here. No one was home, but I happened to be passing," he said. "Of course I came right away."

Briefly Robert was informed of the events of the past hour. His eyes sobered at the sight of the girl who slumped over the desk. No move had been made to conceal her or take her away.

"Couldn't we have a conference, commissioner?" Robert asked. "You said that this murder might be a case of mistaken identity. It's quite true, and yet—"

"May I talk alone to Mr. Barton?" Linda asked. "For just a moment, please?"

The man hesitated. From the canyon of the streets below there came the subdued sound of the night traffic. The theaters were gay and crowded, and the taxicabs carried groups from one to another.

The rain was growing steadier and harder, and it beat against the windows. Grateful as she was for Robert's protection, Linda wished anxiously that Ronnie would come. Maybe he hadn't received any message. And why didn't the commissioner give his consent?

"Everything will come out in the investigation and the coroner's inquest," the official answered. "Any light you may throw on the happening now will save you embarrassment later. However, if you wish a conference, the inner office will do nicely. I'll stay on guard."

It was Robert who answered. "I think you had better come with us. I've a pretty good idea what Miss Avery hesitates to say. It involves a third party, and on the surface sounds ridiculous."

Robert took the lead in the conversation, but it was Linda who mentioned the fact that Mina Nevins could not have left the room where she was broadcasting to come to the office, do a murder, leave, and continue with the program.

In the first place, there would not have been time for her to even reach the place, let alone return. In the second place, the doors always were locked during a broadcast and she could not have left the auditorium where she was speaking during the musical intermission.

"And in the third place, there will be dozens of witnesses to testify she was on hand all the time," the commissioner added. "I'm afraid she's out. But that 'M'—stands for Mina. How many girls in your office have the initial 'M'—models, office force, anyone?"

Linda thought carefully. There wasn't an "M" in the group. She would have declared that there were several, speaking off-handedly, but the inventory showed none.

"Could a model, applying for a place on the Bagley list, have dropped it?" the query came. "Probably, but the charwoman who cleaned the office earlier in the evening would have found it."

The charwoman, summoned, knew nothing. Her eyes were a tired blue and she looked often at the night watchman.

Back in the larger room, Linda noted that a sheet had been thrown over the dead form of the girl. There was something more frightening in that disguise than there had been in the figure of the girl itself.

"Didn't you bring anyone up here, anyone outside of Miss Avery?" the detectives kept asking the elevator operator, who persisted in his denial.

"Nobody but the watchman." "And you took nobody down?" "Nobody."

"Then how could anyone get in? Twelve flights are a long distance to climb. Humph! If someone did this as an outside job, that person must have been on the stairs while the commotion was going on and made an escape while the door was unguarded. Well, we'll have a coroner's inquest in the morning."

Ronnie came then, face white and worried. "They held me up to question me about all this," he said. "I didn't know what had happened. Seems that you were supposed to be killed and somebody else got it."

He put his arm around Linda, searched her face. "All right, Linda, sweet?"

Suddenly she knew where Ronnie had been. Someone had taken him to the police station, remembering that Linda stood in the way of any profitable marriage he might wish to make with the daughter of the man who was giving him a fling at stardom.

League Arranges Plans For Season's Activities

Program Books Completed By Group

Social Calendar

While the last of July may seem early to make plans for winter, members of the Child Conservation League are ready to open their year's work with all arrangements completed for two interesting meetings each month. Two program committees have worked together to produce the complete year plan, attractive program books having already been distributed. Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. Robert T. Kelsey and Mrs. Paul Teegardin comprise the 1940-41 committee, with Mrs. Joseph W. Adkins, Jr., Mrs. Robert Musser and Mrs. John H. Dunlap, Jr., co-operating for the 1941-42 plans. "Social Welfare," "Art, Music and Literature" and "Education" are the three program divisions of the year's study, when new officers take over in September. Mrs. Tom A. Renick is the newly installed president; Mrs. Glen Gelb, vice president; Mrs. Howard Newell Stevenson, secretary and Mrs. Ben Gordon, treasurer.

When the meeting of September 17 is held at the home of Mrs. Kelsey, Mrs. J. E. Groom will be prepared to present an instructive paper on "The General Set-up for Social Welfare in Pickaway County." Miss Clara Southward, case worker, will from her own practical experiences discuss "Work of the Circleville Benevolent Association."

Luncheon meetings are always interesting, so Mrs. Ray Reid and Mrs. Franklin Price will arrange one for October, when Mrs. Robert Adkins (Virginia Smith) will be heard during the program hour. She will tell of "The Administration of Aid to Dependent Children."

Mrs. Bishop Given will be hostess for the second October session with Dr. A. D. Blackburn slated to address the group on "Work Among Crippled Children."

Coming to November 5, Mrs. Glen Gelb will be hostess with Mrs. Lemuel Weldon discussing "Juvenile Delinquency" and Mrs. John W. Eshelman using for her topic, "Is a Community Chest Feasible in Circleville?"

The second program division will be under consideration, with the November 19 session at the home of Mrs. J. E. Groom. Mrs. Brunelle Parrett Downing as guest speaker will talk of "Art Guidance."

Literature will be of immediate interest when Mrs. Karl Mason entertains the league December 3. "A Survey of New Books for Children" will be the timely subject of Mrs. Luther Bower's paper, just when everyone is considering the purchase of gift books for Christmas. Mrs. Adkins will entertain the members with a book review. A luncheon meeting and gift exchange for December 17, and the hostesses for it are Mrs. Donald Walker and Mrs. Winifred Wallace. At this time Mrs. John H. Dunlap will discuss "A Child's Appreciation of Art."

Mrs. Clark Will will be hostess January 7 when Mrs. Ted L. Huston will tell the league members about "Music Guidance." Miss Abbe Mills Clarke will speak January 21 at the home of Mrs. Harry Heffner, her subject, "New Methods of Piano Teaching."

When February arrives, the group will turn its attention to Education. The first meeting of the month will be a luncheon with Mrs. Ben Gordon and Mrs. Karl Mason as hostesses. For this session Marion Bradley, instructor at the Columbus School for Girls has been secured for a talk on "Corrective and Remedial Reading." "Can We Be of Any Help to the School?" will be handled by Mrs. Robert Musser when the league meets February 18 at the home of Mrs. F. K. Blair.

Mrs. Emmitt L. Crist will be hostess March 4 when "The Question of Home Work" will be considered. Mrs. Blair will present the mother's view and Mrs. Sterling Lamb, the teacher's. March 18 will mark the guest day meeting with Dr. Samuel Shellabarger, headmaster of the Columbus School for Girls, as speaker. Mrs. Ray Rowland, Mrs. Kelsey, Mrs. Paul Teegardin and Mrs. Will are scheduled as hostesses.

Mrs. Adkins will be hostess for a first April session when Mrs. G. D. Phillips presents a review of a book chosen from The Teachers' Reading Circle.

Today's Garden-Graph

Pot propagation of strawberries

Strawberry beds need to be renewed every three or four years. New plants for this purpose are easily propagated from runners of the old plants. Pot propagation is an excellent method of doing this.

To secure extra fine plants sink three-inch flower pots to the soil up to their rims near the strawberry bed, as shown in the Garden-Graph. These pots should be filled with fibrous loam. Fasten the tips of runners from the strawberry plants across the soil in the pots, as illustrated. Use hairpins to fasten the end of the runners securely so strong winds will not blow them off the pot before they start to root. For this type of pot propagation it is best to select only the strongest runners from plants which have fruited well. Runners from "blind parents" are unfruitful.

When the pots are filled with roots from the runners, sever the latter from the parent plant. Then remove the new plants from the pots and plant them out. These plants should bear fruit the following year.

Charles Paul, who plays the organ on "My Son and I," is doubling as musical arranger for the new "Manhattan at Midnight" series.

"Wack of the Week" on the Abbott and Costello program Wednesday night will be a female fashion expert. The comedians expect to have a clothes call.

Ray Block's orchestra, which was just signed to supply the music on the "Johnny Presents" programs, has been signed to do Thursday and Saturday programs at 9:45 p. m., the late hour spot the network is trying to build up.

Janet Logan has had to relinquish her role of Helen Stephenson in "Road of Life" because it conflicted with her new starring role, Kay Fairchild, in the "Stepmother" series. She'll continue, however, to appear on "Romance of Helen Trent."

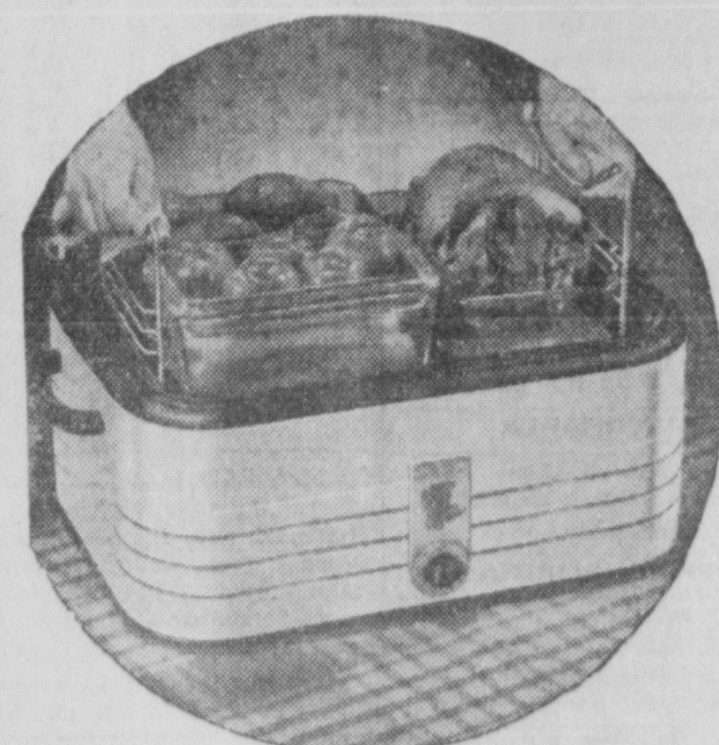

Helen Hardin, commentator, will visit New York in a few weeks on vacation and is already being signed for guest shots on other airings. Her "Everyday Words" programs originate in Chicago.

Virginia Payne, radio's "Ma Perkins," who is also starred in "Carters of Elm Street," expects to do some singing on the latter show. She has resumed vocal lessons as a result.

Today's Garden-Graph

Pot propagation of strawberries

Strawberry beds need to be renewed every three or four years. New plants for this purpose are easily propagated from runners of the old plants. Pot propagation is an excellent method of doing this.

To secure extra fine plants sink three-inch flower pots into the soil up to their rims near the strawberry bed, as shown in the Garden-Graph. These pots should be filled with fibrous loam. Fasten the tips of runners from the strawberry plants across the soil in the pots, as illustrated. Use hairpins to fasten the end of the runners securely so strong winds will not blow them off the pot before they start to root. For this type of pot propagation it is best to select only the strongest runners from plants which have fruited well. Runners from "blind parents" are unfruitful.

When the pots are filled with roots from the runners, sever the latter from the parent plant. Then remove the new plants from the pots and plant them out. These plants should bear fruit the following year.

REDS TO PITCH DERRINGER; 4-3 GAME DROPPED

Big Paul To Seek Revenge
Against Giants; Whitey
Moore Loser

CRAFT, GOODMAN HIT

Dodgers And Pirates Mix
It Up; Brooklyn Drops
Lead, Then Wins

NEW YORK, July 30—Big Paul
Derringer was to take the mound for the Cincinnati Reds today as they sought revenge for the 4 to 3 defeat hung on them by the New York Giants.

Cincinnati was ahead 3-0 going into the last of the sixth, but single runs in each of the last four innings gave the Giants victory.

Whitey Moore, fourth of the Reds' pitchers to see action, was charged with the defeat. Johnny Hutchings started, but gave way to Joe Beggs, Milt Shoffner and
Moore in order.

Harry Craft homered in the fourth and Ival Goodman duplicated his feat in the fifth for two of the Red's three runs. The other counter was scored when Morrie Armovich tripled and scored on Billy Myers' fifth inning fly.

It is becoming more difficult with each passing day to figure whether the Brooklyn Dodgers are really battling for the National League pennant or the right to meet heavyweight Joe Louis, who is having trouble finding suitable opponents.

As of today the daring Dodgers have engaged in fistic battles of personal or free-for-all variety with every club in the senior circuit but three. The teams which have missed becoming involved
thus far in a feud with the Durocher Darlings are the Philadelphia Phillies, the Boston Bees, and, surprisingly enough, the New York Giants.

The Pittsburgh Pirates were the latest victims of the Dodgers' reign. Capt. Arky Vaughan and Catcher Babe Phelps in a wild and wooly ninth inning of yesterday's games after the pudge backstop-per allegedly accused the Buccaneers of throwing a "bean ball."

Both players missed a couple of roundhouse punches, then were pulled apart by the umpires and sent to the showers to cool off.

In between times, Brooklyn managed to nose out the Bees, 7 to 6, in a hair-raising finish, in which Pittsburgh scored six runs in the final frame to tie up the contest and Brooklyn pushed across the winning tally in its half of the same inning.

The St. Louis Cardinals climbed back into fifth place, a spot they relinquished only 24 hours previously to the Pirates, by thumping the cellar-dwelling Boston
Bees, 8 to 3. Big Johnny Mize paced the Red Birds' 10-hit offensive with a single, a double and a triple which accounted for four runs.

The Chicago Cubs, behind the seven-hit pitching of Big Claude Passeau, had little trouble eliminating the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 3. Passeau also had a good day at the plate, punching out two singles.

In the only game in the American League, the Philadelphia Athletics staged two big rallies to score all their runs and upset the front-running Detroit Tigers, 9 to 7. The Tigers now lead the Cleveland Indians by the slim margin of one game.

DEMPSEY KAYOS WRESTLER; 5,000 CHEER EX-CHAMP

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 30—
Jack Dempsey maybe getting a bit on the elderly side, as former heavyweight champions go, but 5,000 fans were convinced today that it will be many years before an unknown gives Dempsey any trouble in the ring.

They were convinced by the way
Dempsey knocked out Ellish Bashara, 28-year-old Oklahoma wrestler, after one minute and 37 seconds of their bout last night. Bashara was on the floor five seconds after the opening gong sounded, and at no time gave the former champion any opposition.

Extreme Heat Continues; State Deaths Soar To 81

Circleville's Temperature Reaches 97 Monday, And Slides To 75 In Night

CINCINNATI RECORDS 100

Ashland Hen House So Hot That Eggs Hatch After Hen Quits Nest

Sweating Circleville and Pickaway County residents faced another day of 90-degree-plus heat Tuesday after the thermometer reached 97 degrees Monday and fell only as low as 75 in the early hours of Tuesday morning. New heat records were being recorded all over Ohio, with 81 deaths attributable either directly or indirectly to the current heat wave.

Pasture in the Circleville district is being burned out, and corn is being damaged greatly by the extreme heat. The wheat harvest will be concluded this week, farm observers say.

Weather forecasters said today and tonight would be fair with the "warm temperatures" continuing. Tomorrow, they said, may bring scattered showers.

The mercury reached a high of 98 degrees in Columbus Monday for the highest reading this year. An official temperature of 100 was recorded in Cincinnati. Marietta reported 99 degrees; Dayton, 95 and Bucyrus, 100.

Two Collapse, Die

Latest deaths were those of Edward L. Reed, 71, and John J. McWilliams, 53, both of Columbus. They died shortly after being rushed to a hospital when they collapsed from the heat at their homes.

Cincinnati reported two more heat deaths, William Morehead, 74, died of a heat stroke and Mrs. Marie Schmanl, 44, Negro died of Rayweed pollen, one of the most offensive for those allergic to hay fever, will soon be filling the air and in abundance.

State Health Department officials declared that because of the heavy rains last spring and the current heat wave, rayweeds are growing more profusely throughout Ohio than for many years. The worst period is expected to be from August 5 to September 10.

a heart attack induced by the heat. The Cincinnati temperature of 100 was equalled in Sandusky, while a reading of 95.2 made yesterday the hottest July 29 in the history of the Cleveland weather bureau. At Cleveland airport the mercury climbed to 96; Youngstown reported 95, and Akron and Toledo 94.

Clarence Moore, 50, of Youngstown, died shortly after he collapsed from the heat.

On an Ashland County farm heat in a hen house was so great that two eggs hatched after a brooding hen left her nest.

State Ranking High In Many-Industry Survey

COLUMBUS, July 30.—Present national emergency activities give new emphasis to Ohio's rank as one of the leading manufacturing states, it is pointed out by Ohio State University's Bureau of Business Research.

Citing federal reports for 1935, the bureau says that in that year Ohio was fifth among all the states in total value of all products manufactured, vying closely with Illinois and Michigan for third or fourth place.

While the value of Ohio's manufactured products was only $113,000,000 less than that of fourth place Illinois, Ohio's total of $3,685,000 was $1,246,000,000 more than the next ranking state.

Among 20 chief manufacturing industries of the nation, the bureau says, Ohio ranks first among the states in six, second in six, third in one, fourth in six, and fifth in one.

In addition to the 20 important industries, Ohio ranks third or better in 18 other small manufacturing industries.

Ohio holds first place in such items as business machines, clay products, electrical machinery and supplies, machine tools, metal products, tires and tubes. It is second in steel work and rolling mills, motor vehicle bodies and parts, glass, foundry and machine shop products, coke, and blast furnaces.

"While Ohio is an important agricultural state, with one fifth of its population actually on farms and 23 million acres of its area devoted to agriculture, nevertheless manufacturing occupations in the state account for almost three times as many gainfully employed workers as does agriculture," the bureau reports.

It is also pointed out that Ohio enjoys the advantage of diversified manufacturing, as shown by the fact that in 1935 a total of 62 of Ohio's industry groups produced valued above $10,000,000.

Dr. Blackburn Discusses Rabies: Cause, Treatment

To safeguard community health and eliminate much taboo concerning the disease of Rabies, Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner in conjunction with the state department of health, has released the following information concerning the disease.

Rabies is preventable, and proper application of the facts now known regarding this disease would soon eradicate it.

Rabies is a specific infectious disease common to man and all domestic animals. It is caused by a virus which when introduced into the body travels along the nerves to the central nervous system where it produces changes that result in paralysis of vital organs causing death in a short time. The interval between the time of exposure and the appearance of symptoms (called the incubation period) varies from a week to many months, depending upon the severity and location of the bites.

Rabies virus is spread from one animal to another usually through the saliva. The virus appears in the saliva of an infected animal several days before symptoms of rabies develop.

The laboratory diagnosis of rabies depends upon finding Negri bodies in the brain. These bodies are larger and more numerous in certain portions of the brain, so that it is extremely important to avoid destroying or mutilating the brain in killing a suspected rabid animal.

Animals suspected of rabies should not be killed at once but, whenever possible, they should be securely confined and kept under observation for at least ten days. This has two distinct advantages.

(a) It permits Negri bodies to develop so that there is more likelihood of finding them.

(b) A diagnosis can be made by a competent Veterinarian from his observation of the animal. The usual symptoms in a dog are:

CLINICAL DIAGNOSIS

Furious Rabies

(a) A change in disposition either more affectionate or more sullen than normal.

(b) Restlessness with a tendency to wander from home and to snap or bite anything which moves.

(c) Refuses food and usually drink but may eat indigestible objects such as stones, leather, etc.

(d) Change of voice so that it becomes hoarse—half bark and half howl.

(e) Paralysis usually beginning in hind legs, gradually becoming total.

(f) The dog does not froth at the mouth and seldom has marked fits.

Dumb Rabies

Symptoms practically same as above except dogs with dumb rabies seldom attempt to bite or become violent. The lower jaw is paralyzed early and drops. The animal acts as though it had a foreign body in its throat. Dogs with dumb rabies are much less apt to howl or be noisy.

TREATMENT

At the earliest possible moment wounds should be cauterized with formalin or fuming nitric acid. Phenol and iodine are of little value in destroying rabies virus. Pasteur treatment is a preventive and not a curative for rabies. It should, therefore, be given as promptly as possible after the person has been exposed.

REMEMBER

1. A rabid dog does not froth at the mouth.

2. He seldom has a fit.

3. A dog suspected of rabies should not be killed. Send for the dog warden, so that the dog may be kept under observation.

4. If a suspected dog cannot be captured alive, do not mutilate the head in killing it, for that prevents an examination of the dog's brain.

5. Call the dog warden or the Board of Health at once when some one has been bitten by a dog. Also see your family physician immediately.

DRIVER GOES THROUGH WALL TO FORCE WIFE TO QUIT BEER PARLOR

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 30.—Bob Sperry, 34-year-old truck driver, is a man of his word.

When he located his wife, after some little search, last night in a suburban beer parlor, she wouldn't, he said, leave the place. Bob went to a drug store and telephoned her from there.

"Come out or I'll wreck the joint," he said. Mrs. Sperry declined again.

A few minutes later Bob drove his heavy sedan through the front wall of the saloon in genuine blitzkrieg style. There was a wild scramble for safety by the customers as the car came to a stop against the back wall of the place, but no one was hurt.

"I just put the car in second gear and came right on through," the truck driver told deputies who arrested him.

SELF-CONFIDENT WILLKIE TALKS OF HIS CHANCES

G. O. P. Nominee Says Only Ardent New Dealers Will Oppose Him

SOLID SOUTH VIEWED

Party Chief Pictures Self As Leader Of Crusade Against Roosevelt

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 30.—With a brand of self-confidence unequalled in recent political history, Wendell L. Willkie was on record today with the statement that only an ardent New Dealer or a Democrat bound by rigid party ties or controlled by a "corrupt and nauseating political machine" could fail to support him at the polls in November.

Without embarrassment and with that curious combination of naivete and ego which has made Willkie the most unusual candidate to walk the Washington trail in many years, the Republican nominee took this position: "1.—No Democrat except a strong New Dealer on a controlled voter could fail to vote for me.

"2.—No Democrat who subscribed to the 1932 platform or who subscribes to the old principles of the party and the later principles of Woodrow Wilson could vote for President Roosevelt.

"3.—I represent the principles for which the Republican party stands—therefore Republicans will vote for me."

Solid South Scoured

The candidate tossed off his viewpoint readily at a press conference when the question of the solid South came up. History shows that the South has been consistently Democratic for years almost without number. That means nothing to this candidate.

A political enigma at Philadelphia, a nomination candidate without support, without machine, without anything political except superb self-confidence and personality which somehow penetrated corn belt and diamond belt simultaneously, Willkie adds up today about as he did then.

Perhaps the best explanation of this candidate is that he believes in himself and believes that the people believe in him. He pictures himself publicly and privately as the leader of a great crusade to wrest control of the country from the New Dealers and restore it to the people.

A Democrat converted to the Republican cause, he has addressed a Republican audience as "you Republicans" and he has no hesitancy about claiming that "leaves will continue to fall" meaning that Democrats will continue to come over to him in increasing numbers.

He does not believe that the New Deal is entirely wrong and has so stated. He is not anti so much as he is pro. It is his theory that the New Deal has bungled "the American way," that the Democratic processes must be saved and that they can best be saved by electing him. He would not scrap TVA which he opposed bitterly, but now that it is functioning he says he would insist on honest bookkeeping. He would not scrap the social reforms of the New Deal but he would redesign them, he says, along business lines.

Would Permit Switch

He is as confident of cracking the solid South as he is of attracting the vote in other sections of the country. Friends are already functioning in his behalf for the setting up of a third ticket of electors in the South to permit Democrats to vote for him with-

Washington Merry-Go-Round

mines and several other mass production industries.

"I want to go straight to the factory door," Willkie told his campaign advisers. "I want to carry my message straight to the workshops of labor as well as from the usual campaign platforms."

NOTE—GOP chiefs will not limber their big campaign howitzers until after Labor Day. Willkie will formally launch the campaign with a Labor Day address at a place yet to be picked, and from that moment on the country will witness one of the hottest and most intensive campaigns in history.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Engineers figure that it takes a block of ice 105 feet square and towering as high as the Washington Monument (555 feet) to cool the Capitol buildings in the summer "cooling season" of 170 days, from mid-May to the end of October. . . . This government is issuing visas for admission of foreigners from all parts of the world at the rate of 2500 to 3000 a day. Those coming on immigration visas, under quota restrictions, pay a $10 fee. But most come on visitors' visas, which do not cost Canadians, Cubans, and Mexicans anything, but cost $2 for British citizens. . . . Oddly parallel in the diplomatic service are the careers of Clarence E. Gauss, new Minister to Australia, and Frank P. Lockhart, newly appointed Consul General at Shanghai. Into each of Gauss's last three posts—Tientsin, Peking, and Shanghai—Lockhart has followed.

NAZI AIR ROUTES

While the world's attention is fastened on Havana, the Germans are making strides with a type of penetration not on the agenda of that conference—the extension of German airlines in South America.

Through the Nazi air holding company, Lufthansa, subsidies are being handed out liberally to domestic companies under German control. Most aggressive is the German subsidiary in Ecuador, SEDTA, whose operators ingratiate themselves by the well known junket method. That is, they give free rides all around the country to Ecuadorian government officials.

This infiltration is a threat to U. S. influence, but more dangerous still, it gives the Germans connecting airlines which run all the way from the coast of Brazil through Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, and Colombia to within striking distance of the Panama Canal.

Now, however, the Civil Aeronautics Authority and State Department have worked out a plan to combat the German influence by extending the existing U. S. airline in Ecuador with post office subsidies. The line is Panagra, subsidiary of Pan American Airways.

out making the switch to the Republican party. An independent Democratic ticket, it would carry the same electors as the Republican ticket.

PROPER CARE OF EVERGREEN TREE DURING SUMMER

At this particular time evergreens planted this year or even last year need plenty of water. In spite of the rains we have had recently a heavy watering every two weeks is essential for the roots of the evergreens are one and a half or two feet down in the soil and ordinary rains do not reach to that depth to give each tree from five to ten gallons of water each two weeks depending on the size of the tree.

See that there is a depression around the base of the tree to get the water to go to the roots instead of running off on the surface. Where hose is available turn on sufficient water to just trickle out of the hose and leave it run at the base of each tree for an hour or two.

Spray the tops of the trees several times during the summer season while it is extremely hot, this will discourage red spider which affects arbor vitae especially. Browning of the tops of the trees may indicate the presence of bagworms. For these spray with arsenate of lead. About this time of year is a desirable time to trim evergreens.

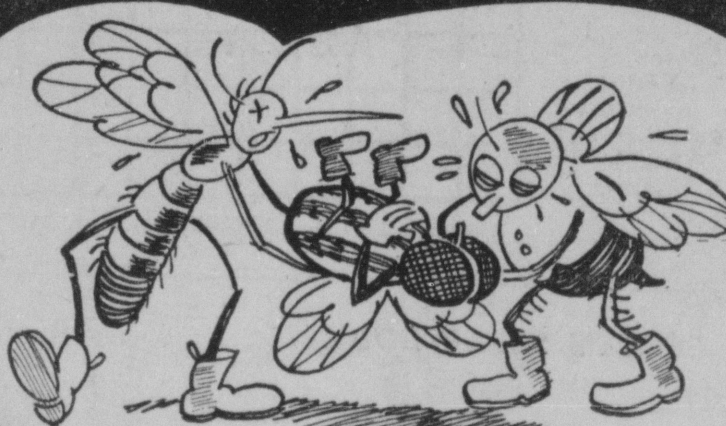

You can cut back Pfister Jun-

pers rather severely if they are becoming too large. All types of arbor vitae will become more dense if sheared at this time of year. Your florist or nurseryman will be glad to offer suggestions or answer questions about the care of your trees, shrubs, evergreens, and plants.

State Ranking High In Many-Industry Survey

COLUMBUS, July 30.—Present national emergency activities give new emphasis to Ohio's rank as one of the leading manufacturing states. It is pointed out by Ohio State University's Bureau of Business Research.

Citing federal reports for 1935, the bureau says that in that year Ohio was fifth among all the states in total value of all products manufactured, vying closely with Illinois and Michigan for third or fourth place.

While the value of Ohio's manufactured products was only $113,000,000 less than that of fourth place Illinois, Ohio's total of $3,685,000 was $1,246,000,000 more than the next ranking state.

Among 20 chief manufacturing industries of the nation, the bureau says, Ohio ranks first among the states in six, second in six, third in one, fourth in six, and fifth in one.

In addition to the 20 important industries, Ohio ranks third or better in 18 other small manufacturing industries.

Ohio holds first place in such items as business machines, clay products, electrical machinery and supplies, machine tools, metal products, tires and tubes. It is second in steel work and rolling mills, motor vehicle bodies and parts, glass, foundry and machine shop products, coke, and blast furnaces.

"While Ohio is an important agricultural state, with one fifth of its population actually on farms and 25 million acres of its area devoted to agriculture, nevertheless manufacturing occupations in the state account for almost three times as many gainfully employed workers as does agriculture," the bureau reports.

It is also pointed out that Ohio enjoys the advantage of diversified manufacturing, as shown by the fact that in 1935 a total of 62 of Ohio's industry groups produced valued above $10,000,000.

Dr. Blackburn Discusses Rabies: Cause, Treatment

To safeguard community health and eliminate much taboo concerning the disease of Rabies, Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner in conjunction with the state department of health, has released the following information concerning the disease.

Rabies is preventable, and proper application of the facts now known regarding this disease would soon eradicate it.

Rabies is a specific infectious disease common to man and all domestic animals. It is caused by a virus which when introduced into the body travels along the nerves to the central nervous system where it produces changes that result in paralysis of vital organs causing death in a short time. The interval between the time of exposure and the appearance of symptoms (called the incubation period) varies from a week to many months, depending upon the severity and location of the bites.

Rabies virus is spread from one animal to another usually through the saliva. The virus appears in the saliva of an infected animal several days before symptoms of rabies develop.

The laboratory diagnosis of rabies depends upon finding Negri bodies in the brain. These bodies are larger and more numerous in certain portions of the brain, so that it is extremely important to avoid destroying or mutilating the brain in killing a suspected rabid animal.

Animals suspected of rabies should not be killed at once but, whenever possible, they should be securely confined and kept under observation for at least ten days. This has two distinct advantages.

(a) It permits Negri bodies to develop so that there is more likelihood of finding them.
(b) A diagnosis can be made by a competent Veterinarian from his observation of the animal. The usual symptoms in a dog are:

- CLINICAL DIAGNOSIS
Furious Rabies
- (a) A change in disposition either more affectionate or more sultry than normal.
  - (b) Restlessness with a tendency to wander from home and to snap or bite anything which moves.
  - (c) Refuses food and usually drink but may eat indigestible objects such as stones, leather, etc.
  - (d) Change of voice so that it becomes hoarse—half bark and half howl.
  - (e) Paralysis usually beginning in hind legs, gradually becoming total.
  - (f) The dog does not froth at the mouth and seldom has marked fits.

Dumb Rabies

Symptoms practically same as above except dogs with dumb rabies seldom attempt to bite or become violent. The lower jaw is paralyzed early and drops. The animal acts as though it had a foreign body in its throat. Dogs with dumb rabies are much less apt to howl or be noisy.

TREATMENT

At the earliest possible moment wounds should be cauterized with formalin or fuming nitric acid. Phenol and iodine are of little value in destroying rabies virus.

Pasteur treatment is a preventive and not a curative for rabies. It should, therefore, be given as promptly as possible after the person has been exposed.

REMEMBER

1. A rabid dog does not froth at the mouth.
2. He seldom has a fit.
3. A dog suspected of rabies should not be killed. Send for the dog warden, so that the dog may be kept under observation.
4. If a suspected dog cannot be captured alive, do not mutilate the head in killing it, for that prevents an examination of the dog's brain.
5. Call the dog warden or the Board of Health at once when some one has been bitten by a dog. Also see your family physician immediately.

DRIVER GOES THROUGH WALL TO FORCE WIFE TO QUIT BEER PARLOR

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 30.—Bob Sperry, 34-year-old truck driver, is a man of his word.

When he located his wife, after some little search, last night in a suburban beer parlor, she wouldn't, he said, leave the place. Bob went to a drug store and telephoned her from there.

"Come out or I'll wreck the joint," he said. Mrs. Sperry declined again.

A few minutes later Bob drove his heavy sedan through the front wall of the saloon in genuine blitzkrieg style. There was a wild scramble for safety by the customers as the car came to a stop against the back wall of the place, but no one was hurt.

"I just put the car in second gear and came right on through," the truck driver told deputies who arrested him.

SELF-CONFIDENT WILLKIE TALKS OF HIS CHANCES

G. O. P. Nominee Says Only Ardent New Dealers Will Oppose Him

SOLID SOUTH VIEWED

Party Chief Pictures Self As Leader Of Crusade Against Roosevelt

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 30.—With a brand of self-confidence unequalled in recent political history, Wendell L. Willkie was on record today with the statement that only an ardent New Dealer or a Democrat bound by rigid party ties or controlled by a "corrupt and nauseating political machine" could fail to support him at the polls in November.

Without embarrassment and with that curious combination of naivete and ego which has made Willkie the most unusual candidate to walk the Washington trail in many years, the Republican nominee took this position:

"1.—No Democrat except a strong New Dealer on a controlled voter could fail to vote for me.

"2.—No Democrat who subscribed to the 1932 platform or who subscribes to the old principles of the party and the later principles of Woodrow Wilson could vote for President Roosevelt.

Solid South Scoured

The candidate tossed off his viewpoint readily at a press conference when the question of the solid South came up. History shows that the South has been consistently Democratic for years almost without number. That means nothing to this candidate.

A political enigma at Philadelphia, a nomination candidate without support, without machine, without anything political except superb self-confidence and personality which somehow penetrated corn belt and diamond belt simultaneously, Willkie adds up today about as he did then.

Perhaps the best explanation of this candidate is that he believes in himself and believes that the people believe in him. He pictures himself publicly and privately as the leader of a great crusade to wrest control of the country from the New Dealers and restore it to the people.

A Democrat converted to the Republican cause, he has addressed a Republican audience as "you Republicans" and he has no hesitancy about claiming that the "leaves will continue to fall" meaning that Democrats will continue to come over to him in increasing numbers.

He does not believe that the New Deal is entirely wrong and has so stated. He is not anti so much as he is pro. It is his theory that the New Deal has bungled "the American way," that the Democratic processes must be saved and that they can best be saved by electing him. He would not scrap TVA which he opposed bitterly, but now that it is functioning he says he would insist on honest bookkeeping. He would not scrap the social reforms of the New Deal but he would redesign them, he says, along business lines.

Would Permit Switch

He is as confident of cracking the Solid South as he is of attracting the vote in other sections of the country. Friends are already functioning in his behalf for the setting up of a third ticket of electors in the South to permit Democrats to vote for him without mines and several other mass production industries.

"I want to go straight to the factory door," Willkie told his campaign advisers. "I want to carry my message straight to the workshops of labor as well as from the usual campaign platforms."

NOTE—GOP chiefs will not unlimber their big campaign howitzer until after Labor Day. Willkie will formally launch the campaign with a Labor Day address at a place yet to be picked, and from that moment on the country will witness one of the hottest and most intensive campaigns in history.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Engineers figure that it takes a block of ice 105 feet square and towering as high as the Washington Monument (555 feet) to cool the Capitol buildings in the summer "cooling season" of 170 days, from mid-May to the end of October. . . . This government is issuing visas for admission of foreigners from all parts of the world at the rate of 2500 to 3000 a day. Those coming on immigration visas, under quota restrictions, pay a $10 fee. But most come on visitors' visas, which do not cost anything, but cost $2 for British citizens. . . . Oddly parallel in the diplomatic service are the careers of Clarence E. Gauss, new Minister to Australia, and Frank P. Lockhart, newly appointed Consul General at Shanghai. Into each of Gauss's last three posts—Tientsin, Peiping, and Shanghai—Lockhart has followed.

NAZI AIR ROUTES

While the world's attention is fastened on Havana, the Germans are making strides with a type of penetration not on the agenda of that conference—the extension of German airlines in South America.

Through the Nazi air holding company, Luftthansa, subsidies are being handed out liberally to domestic companies under German control. Most aggressive is the German subsidiary in Ecuador, SEDTA, whose operators ingratiate themselves by the well known junket method. That is, they give free rides all around the country to Ecuadorean government officials.

This infiltration is a threat to U. S. influence, but more dangerous still, it gives the Germans connecting airlines which run all the way from the coast of Brazil through Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, and Colombia to within striking distance of the Panama Canal.

Now, however, the Civil Aeronautics Authority and State Department have worked out a plan to combat the German influence by extending the existing U. S. airline in Ecuador with post office subsidies. The line is Panagra, subsidiary of Pan American Airways.

PROPER CARE OF EVERGREEN TREE DURING SUMMER

At this particular time evergreens planted this year or even last year need plenty of water. In spite of the rains we have had recently a heavy watering every two weeks is essential for the roots of the evergreens are one and a half or two feet down in the soil and ordinary rains do not reach to that depth to give each tree from five to ten gallons of water each two weeks depending on the size of the tree.

See that there is a depression around the base of the tree to get the water to go to the roots instead of running off on the surface. Where hose is available turn on sufficient water to just trickle out of the hose and leave it run at the base of each tree for an hour or two.

Spray the tops of the trees several times during the summer season while it is extremely hot, this will discourage red spider which affects arbor vitae especially. Browning of the tops of the trees may indicate the presence of bagworms. For these spray with arsenate of lead. About this time of year is a desirable time to trim evergreens.

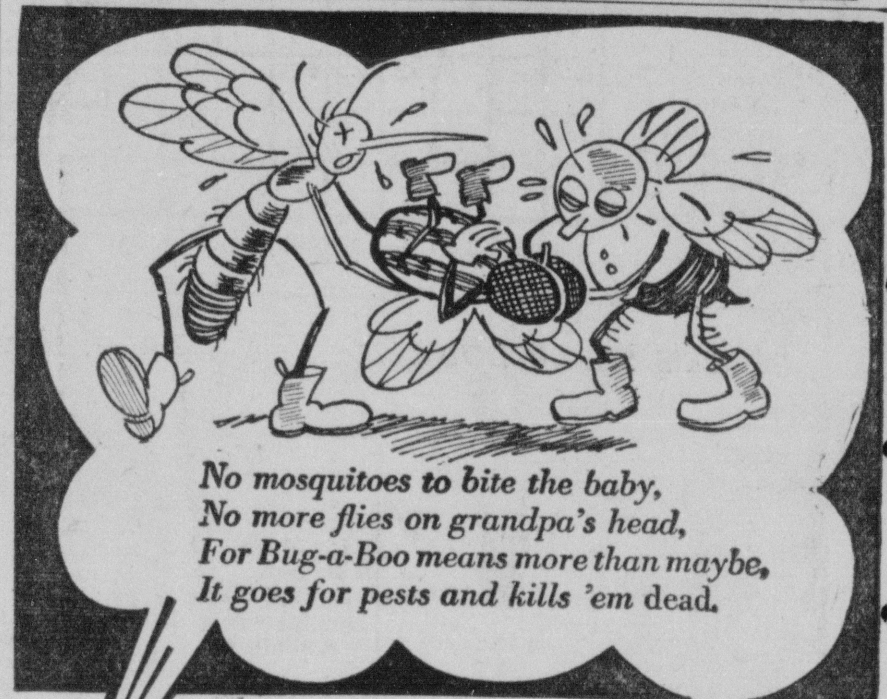

You can cut back Pfitzer Juni-

pers rather severely if they are becoming too large. All types of arbor vitae will become more dense if sheared at this time of year. Your florist or nurseryman will be glad to offer suggestions or answer questions about the care of your trees, shrubs, evergreens, and plants.
